

FSO SERVICES NEWS

APRIL 2023

We help clients maintain a simple and compliant security program.

ADVERSE INFORMATION

Reporting adverse information is critical for a strong industrial security program.

It's imperative that you adequately train your staff about the information they need to report, indicators to be aware of, and the process to notify their manager or the FSO.

Adverse information about an employee suggests that their ability to safeguard classified information may be impaired.

Proper Incident Reporting

NISPOM requirements for reporting, tracking, and replying to incidents have become more stringent. If you do not comply with SEAD3, you will have a negative audit, which could even impact your facility clearance status. Contact FSD Services to learn more about how we can help you with policies and procedures to ensure you meet requirements and get stellar audit results.

ADJUDICATIVE GUIDELINES

Investigators will follow a process that applies a standard set of guidelines for assessing an individual for clearance. These include loyalty, trustworthiness, and reliability. They play a major part in determining whether it is in the best interest of national security to grant the individual a clearance to access classified information.

FSO Services Achieves Commendable Rating

FSO Services is proud to have achieved a commendable rating from DCSA during our recent vulnerability assessment. This rating results from our team's diligent work maintaining our facility and personnel clearance records. Regular self-assessments helped us ensure this high rating.

"We are honored to receive this rating, said David Touchton, President of FSO-Services. "This was a team effort, and we look forward to helping others to achieve similar results!"

Congratulations to our team for all the work that went into this achievement.

We regularly work with our clients to help them achieve results like these. FSO Services works with companies to conduct thorough self-assessments, maintain FCL and PCL accuracy and documentation, and meet all requirements dictated by NISPOM. To learn more about the rating process, click here.
